 socialism. I mean, in general, universal socialism, not in special; no man can carry his ambition very far in special socialism, and in order to know politics there must be in the man some natural disposition for friends. I have often been appealed to by friends, who said: "Can't you take a young man and give him employment? Then I will watch that young then, everybody who is going to practice newspaper profession ought to know Respaire. He is the chief master of English. He is the head of English literature. Considered as a writer, considered as a philosopher, I do not know whether he can be named with him. He is not merely a constructor of plays that are powerful and impressive. His plays are set upon the stage, with all the auxiliary lights, and scenery, and characters; he is a literary treasure, a magnificent storehouse of tion. No one is happy. The writer comes to the exchange reader in the newspaper organization, comes the man whose duty it is to sort out the manuscripts and examine them and prepare them for the printer, to edit them, correct them; where the writer has made a little slip of rhetoric, put the right word in or the right turn of phrase; to clarify it all; to make the sentences clean. That is a hard job in the newspaper, for there are great many persons. They interfere with the writer's business. They do not begin and say the thing in its own order, taking first the man and then what he said, and where he went; but they mix it up and complicate it. The editor who examines manuscripts has got to go through all this and straighten them out and disengage the facts that the writer has twisted and mixed up, and then he has to make a conclusion, mark the paragraphs where the idea is finished and a new idea begins. He also receives the correspondence. Letters from all over the world go into his hands. You will get a letter from Madagascar, perhaps. Ought it to be published? It is a lot of news in it, perhaps, that is of interest to the world. But the editor has to get to determine whether it is necessary to put that in or to leave it out, although he may have to pay for it and not use it. Some of the matter are paid for in a large newspaper office that are never used. So you see it is a very important functionary, and it is

The order affects over fifteen hundred in the Omaha shops of the company, and the rate of pay will remain the same per hour, but the pay roll of the company by $75,000. The reason says to get the rolling stock of the company in shape for the coming of winter.

It is the plan of the company to appointing of receivers operators of the organization of all existing contracts as a condition of the new pay was not violated, and none would be made.

Arrested for Absence.

Young, 25 years old, of 240 East 121st street, was arrested last night by Agent Mulvihill of the Bureau and taken up in the Thirtieth street station, charged with neglecting Maud Brown, the fourteen-year-old sister of John Brown, a car cleaner on the Avenue elevated road, living at 251 East 121st street.

Last Monday night the Brown girl went to see her mother at the latter's flat. The woman told her that her mother had been on the Avenue road. They went to a house of ill fame kept by Rose McCarthy, in Wooster street, where the girl was left. The next morning the mother of the house sent word to Police Officer Mulvihill that the girl had been taken away the girl taken away. It is a car cleaner. A harbor girl of fourteen in such a way.

At Geo.

South colonies of the Chattered Companies, without any interference from the Matabele warriors, and are following along the high veldt in the hope of reaching the Victoria Nile in the bush country ground. A flight is expected daily between before a meeting at Fort Salisbury. The British Government, however, said he believed the South African mining company had done its best to develop the country, and that it was rich in minerals. Although as large as it was, it was scarcely settled. The Government looked out 400 miles of bearing claims, and the colonists could hunt for savages run in and out against the Indians.

There were 1,400 troops in the field against the Matabeles. More than a thousand of them were in the bush country, and the remainder of all South Africa and England. There was no doubt that the difficulty would be cleared up.

Closing the Indian Mints.

London, Oct. 16.—The Standard correspondent writes: "The closure of the Indian mints is becoming operative. Exchange is gradually rising in the last ten days to 15*1*/₂, and it is believed that Council bills will be tendered for on Wednesday at or even over 16*1*/₂. The imports of silver seem to be declining, which lately have been doing a profitable business, and are likely to be distinctly short. The Bank of Bombay raised the rate last week and the Bank of India is expected to do the same on Thursday.
